

David Goodtree

David Goodtree is Co-Chair and Founder of the Symposium on Water Innovation In Massachusetts, an association of water technology industry executives focused on bringing clean, abundant water to global markets through technology created in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

His work to promote the industry includes leading an international trade delegation of 45 executives known as the Massachusetts Water Innovation Mission to Israel, co-organizing the “W.E.T. Revolution Competition” to highlight innovative water tech companies, creating the Massachusetts Water Industry Market Map, and helping plan Governor Patrick’s Trade Mission to Israel.

David is a frequent speaker on the innovation economy and water technology, at recent events organized by TEDxBoston, E2 Environmental Entrepreneurs, the MIT Enterprise Forum, the Brandeis Global Trade Summit, New England-Israel Business Council, the Small Business Association of New England, and the World Class Cities Partnership.

Previously, David was VP Marketing with Akamai Technologies from the company’s pre-commercial launch through IPO, and also served as Group Director of Forrester Research, providing market research and strategic advice in telecommunications, networking, and computing.

David is an active angel investor and board advisor in technology, and a community volunteer working with non-profits and promoting the Massachusetts economy through local innovation and global export.
